Course Goals

We will survey American history from the ante-bellum period to the present. We will study both macro and micro topics. One goal of this class will be to learn about economic events, factors and arguments in order to explain current economic events through an historical lens. Another goal will be to use the tools of economics to analyze important research questions in economic history.

Prerequisites

Prerequisites are strictly enforced by the economics department. If you do not have the prerequisites a department administrator will remove you from the course at any time without warning. Course instructors/I cannot waive prerequisites.

For individual questions regarding prerequisites, please contact Professor Robert Gazzale, Chair of Undergraduate Studies.

Students with Disabilities

Please let me know as soon as possible if you would like special accommodations/arrangements either in class or in the event that the building must be evacuated. For disability-related accommodations, please also see the following website: <http://www.accessibility.utoronto.ca>.

Plagiarism

Don't do it! Plagiarism, as defined by the Merriam-Webster Dictionary, includes using someone else's words, phrases, texts, or rewording someone else's thoughts, without giving he/she due credit. The standard penalty for violations of academic integrity in this course will be an F grade for the course. It is your responsibility to check the student guide to academic honesty at <http://academicintegrity.utoronto.ca/>.

Text

The textbook for this class is A New Economic View of American History from Colonial Times to 1940 by Jeremy Atack and Peter Passell (2nd edition). Assigned chapters are available at portal.utoronto.ca. The reading list below contains a collection of journal articles, scholarly book chapters and textbook chapters. (Active) links to each reading are included. Readings which appear with an asterisk (*) next to them are required reading for the course. History of the American Economy by Walton and Rockoff (11th edition) should be consulted for a background on some of the material covered in the course.

ChatGPT

The knowing use of generative artificial intelligence tools, including ChatGPT and other AI writing and coding assistants, for the completion of, or to support the completion of, an examination, term test, assignment, or any other form of academic assessment, may be considered an academic offence in this course.
