The Economic History of Later-Medieval and Early Modern Europe, 1300 - 1750

Topic 7 [14]

The Era of the European ‘Price Revolution’, ca. 1520 - 1640: Inflation and Economic Growth

The Hamilton Thesis on ‘Profit Inflation’

READINGS:

Within each section, all readings are listed in the chronological order of original publication (when that can be ascertained), except for collections of essays.

A. Some Textbook Surveys: Europe and England

Note that the chief failing of many of these surveys, especially written by historians, is inadequate or faulty economics. So read with care!

1. Sir George Clark, The Wealth of England, 1496-1760 (London, 1946), chapter 2, ‘England During the Price Revolution’, pp.41-56. Surprisingly good, despite its age.
- * 2. Peter Ramsey, Tudor Economic Problems (London, 1965, chapter 4, ‘Prices and Social Change’, pp. 113-45. Quite a good discussion of the forces for inflation, monetary and demographic, though still with some errors in both economics and economic history.
3. Frank C. Spooner, ‘Secular Price Movements and Problems in Capital Formation’, in Deuxième conférence internationale d'histoire économique/Second International Conference of Economic History, Aix-en-Provence 1962, École pratique des hautes études - Sorbonne, Sixième Section: Sciences économiques et sociales, Congrès et Colloques, tome VIII (Mouton and Co: Paris-The Hague, 1965), pp. 127-40.
4. Ruggiero Romano, ‘Mouvement des prix et développement économique: le cas de l’Amérique du Sud au XVIII^e siècle’, in Deuxième conférence internationale d'histoire économique/Second International Conference of Economic History, Aix-en-Provence 1962, École pratique des hautes études - Sorbonne, Sixième Section: Sciences économiques et sociales, Congrès et Colloques, tome VIII (Mouton and Co: Paris-The Hague, 1965), pp. 141-52.
- * 5. Harry A. Miskimin, The Economy of Later Renaissance Europe, 1460-1600 (1969; 2nd edn. Cambridge, 1977), chapter 2, pp. 20-46. Fairly good, intelligently presented survey, if somewhat oversimplified.
6. L.A. Clarkson, The Pre-Industrial Economy in England, 1500-1750 (London, 1971): chapters 2 and 3.
-  7. Ralph Davis, The Rise of the Atlantic Economies (1973), chapter 6: ‘The Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries: Population, Prices, and Incomes’, pp. 88-107. Excellent survey, if somewhat weak on economics.

8. Immanuel Wallerstein, The Modern World System: Capitalist Agriculture and the Origins of the European World Economy in the Sixteenth Century (New York and London, 1974), chapter 2, pp. 66-131.
9. Walter Minchinton, 'Patterns and Structure of Demand, 1500-1750', in C.M. Cipolla, ed., Fontana Economic History of Europe, Vol. II: Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries (London, 1974), pp. 83-176.
10. Hermann Kellenbenz, Rise of the European Economy: Economic History of Continental Europe, 1500-1750 (London, 1976), pp. 15-27, 190-4. Somewhat disappointing.
11. Jan De Vries, The Economy of Europe in an Age of Crisis, 1600-1750 (Cambridge, 1977), chapter 1, pp. 1-29.
-  12. Donald C. Coleman, The Economy of England, 1450-1750 (Oxford, 1977), chapter 2, 'Population and Prices, Mainly to 1650', pp. 12-50. Very good survey indeed.
- * 13. Christopher Clay, Economic Expansion and Social Change: England, 1500 - 1700, 2 vols. (Cambridge, 1984), Vol. I: People, Land, and Towns, chapter 2, 'The Course of Prices', pp. 28 - 51 (with tables). Quite comprehensive, very up to date, generally very good, if not always solid in economic theory (in not clearly distinguishing between changes in relative prices and changes in the price level: a failing of most historical studies on this debate).
14. Dennis O. Flynn, ed., World Silver and Monetary History in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries (Aldershot: Variorum, 1996). Collected essays.
15. Lee A. Craig and Douglas Fisher, The European Macroeconomy: Growth, Integration, and Cycles, 1500 - 1913 (Cheltenham and Northampton, Mass.: Edward Elgar, 2000).
16. Peter Bernholz, Monetary Regimes and Inflation: History, Economics and Political Relationships (Northampton, MA: Edward Elgar, 2003).
17. Richard Tilly, Geld und Kredit in der Wirtschaftsgeschichte, Grunzüge der modernen Wirtschaftsgeschichte, vol. 4 (Stuttgart: Fritz Steiner Verlag, 2003).
18. John H. Munro, 'Money and Coinage: Western Europe', in Jonathan Dewald, et al, eds., Europe 1450 to 1789: Encyclopedia of the Early Modern World (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons/The Gale Group, 2004), Vol. 4, pp. 174-184.
18. Michael North, 'Money and Coinage: Eastern Europe', in Jonathan Dewald, et al, eds., Europe 1450 to 1789: Encyclopedia of the Early Modern World (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons/The Gale Group, 2004), Vol. 4, pp. 184-86.
19. Petr Vorel, Silver in the European Monetary Circulation, 16th - 17th Century (1472-1717) (Prague: Rybka Publishers, 2009).

B. The Debate over the Price Revolution

1. George A. Moore, ed., The Response of Jean Bodin to the Paradoxes of Malestroit and The Paradoxes, translated from the French Second Edition, Paris 1578 (Washington,

- D.C.: Country Dollar Press, 1946). The historic origins of the debate.¹
2. Georg Wiebe, Zur Geschichte der Preisrevolution des XVI. und XVII. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1895). The classic exposition of the monetary thesis, providing the origins of the modern debate.
 - * 3. Earl Hamilton, ‘American Treasure and Andalusian Prices, 1503-1660: A Study in the Spanish Price Revolution’, Journal of Economic and Business History, 1 (February 1928), 1-35, reprinted in P.H. Ramsey, ed., The Price Revolution in Sixteenth-Century England (London, 1971), pp. 147-81. The study that sparked the modern debate, though his monetary ideas were obviously not original.

 5. Earl Hamilton, ‘Imports of American Gold and Silver into Spain, 1503-1660’, Quarterly Journal of Economics, 43 (1929): 436-72.
 6. Earl Hamilton, American Treasure and the Price Revolution in Spain, 1501-1650 (Cambridge, Mass., 1934; reissued 1965). See especially Chapter XII: ‘Wages: Money and Real’, pp. 262-82; and Chapter XIII: ‘Why Prices Rose’, pp. 283-308. See also the Appendices (pp. 309-403), with statistical tables on prices and wages.
 7. Moritz John Elsas, ‘Price Data from Munich, 1500 - 1700’, Economic History: supplement to The Economic Journal, 3 (February 1935), 63 - 78. Evidently the first to argue for a demographic explanation of the Price Revolution.
 8. Earl Hamilton, Money, Prices, and Wages in Valencia, Aragon, and Navarre, 1351 - 1500 (Cambridge, Massachusetts: Harvard University Press, 1936).
 - * 9. Carlo M. Cipolla, ‘La prétendue ‘révolution des prix’: Réflexions sur l’expérience italienne’, Annales: Économies, sociétés, civilisations, 10 (1955), 513-16. Reprinted in Peter Burke, ed., Economy and Society in Early Modern Europe: Essays from Annales (London, 1972), pp. 43-46. One of the earliest attacks on Hamilton’s Price-Revolution thesis.
 10. Marjorie Grice-Hutchinson, The School of Salamanca: Readings in Spanish Monetary Theory, 1544 - 1605 (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1952).
 11. Ingrid Hammarstrom, ‘The Price Revolution of the Sixteenth Century: Some Swedish Evidence’, The Scandinavian Economic History Review, 5 (1957). Reprinted in Peter Ramsey, ed., The Price Revolution in Sixteenth-Century England, Debates in Economic History series (London, 1971), pp. 42-58. Another assault on Hamilton.
 12. Y.S. Brenner, ‘The Inflation of Prices in Early Sixteenth-Century England’, Economic History Review, 2nd ser., 14:2 (1962), 225-39; reprinted in Peter Ramsey, ed., The Collection des principaux économistes, nouvelle édition, 2 vols. (Paris: Librairie Félix Alcan, 1934); Les paradoxes du Seigneur de Malestroict, conseiller du Roy, et Maistre ordinaire de ses comptes, sur le faict des monnoyes, presentez à sa Majesté, au mois de mars MDLXVI (Paris, 1566); La response de maistre Jean Bodin advocat en la cour au paradoxe des monsieur de Malestroit touchant l’enchérissement de toutes choses et le moyen d’y remedier (Paris: Chez Martin le Jeuen, 1568). Original edition.

Price Revolution in Sixteenth-Century England, Debates in Economic History series (London, 1971), pp. 69-90. Similarly attacks Hamilton.

13. Y.S. Brenner, 'The Inflation of Prices in England, 1551-1650', Economic History Review, 2nd ser. 15 (1962-3), 266-84.
14. J.D. Gould, 'The Price Revolution Reconsidered', Economic History Review, 2nd ser., 17:2 (1964), pp. 249-66. Reprinted in Peter Ramsey, ed., The Price Revolution in Sixteenth-Century England, Debates in Economic History series (London, 1971), pp. 91-116.
15. F.P. Braudel and F. Spooner, 'Prices in Europe from 1450 to 1750', in E. E. Rich, ed., Cambridge Economic History of Europe, Vol. IV: The Economy of Expanding Europe in the 16th and 17th Centuries (1967), pp. 374-486. Only for the more courageous: very long, often opaque and certainly difficult for novices in this field. To be skim-read.
-  16. R.B. Outhwaite, Inflation in Tudor and Early Stuart England, Studies in Economic and Social History Series, (1969; 2nd edn., London, 1982). Very compact in 60 pages; and very thorough -- though it may require a second reading to become clear. Do not, however, accept everything he says uncritically, especially because of some weaknesses in economics. The second edition does not adequately reflect the scholarship published since his first editon.
17. Frederic Mauro, Le XVIe siècle européen: aspects économiques, Nouvelle Clio no. 32 (Paris, 1970). It would be desirable but quite impractical to read the whole book. For those who read French well, Part II: chapter 2, 'La demande' and chapter 3, 'Les jeux de l'offre et de la demande', pp. 156-264.
- * 18. Peter Ramsey, ed., The Price Revolution in Sixteenth-Century England, Debates in Economic History series (London, 1971).
 - (a) Peter Ramsey, 'Introduction', pp. 1-18.
 - (b) E.H. Phelps Brown and Sheila Hopkins, 'Seven Centuries of the Prices of Consumables Compared with Builders' Wage Rates', pp. 18-41. Reprinted from Economica, 23 (November 1956).

Again, do not accept everything in this collection uncritically; and read carefully the review of this book in the following:

Donald McCloskey, 'Review of Ramsey, ed., The Price Revolution', in The Journal of Political Economy, 80 (1972), 1332-35.

N.B. The most interesting development in monetary theory concerning the nature of inflation during the ‘Price Revolution’ has been the application of the monetary approach to the balance of payments, which you can find especially in Flynn (1978) and Fisher (1989) above. For the economic theory involved, you should consult the following studies:

D. The 'Real' Factors: Demographic and Other Physical Forces Influencing Price Changes

N.B. In examining these readings and discussing price-changes during the Price-Revolution era, you must be very careful -- as many of the following authors have not been so careful -- to distinguish between changes in relative prices and changes in the price level: changes in nominal prices and changes in real prices (in terms of changes in the CPI).

QUESTIONS

1. What were the basic causes of European inflation in the sixteenth and early seventeenth centuries: monetary, or ‘real’ or some combination of the two? Be sure to understand the difference between relative price changes and changes in the level of prices.
2. On the monetary side: how much importance can you attribute to the influx and distribution of Central European silver (from ca. 1460 to ca. 1530), American silver (from ca. 1530), European coinage debasements, dishoardings and changes in the velocity of coinage circulation, to the expanded use of credit, and to government borrowings and expenditures?
3. If American treasure is seen as the major monetary factor by the mid-16th century, as many argue, how did the silver from the mines of Mexico and Peru get distributed to the various European countries -- and from one country to another?
4. On the ‘real side’, how much of the inflation may be attributed to the growth of population (demographic pressures): in particular to the rapid growth in demand for such commodities as grain, lumber, metals, wood, and fuels? Why would supply not keep pace with such demands? Can increases in the prices of specific commodities be termed ‘inflationary’? Or can demographic and other such ‘real factors account for no more than relative price changes? Are the ‘monetary’ and ‘real’ arguments contradictory, mutually exclusive, or complementary?
5. How useful an analytical tool is the Fisher Identity [$M.V = P.T$] for delineating and explaining the processes of inflation? How useful is the Cambridge ‘cash balances’ approach: $M = k.P.T$? How has Friedman and his school modified the modern quantity theory of money? How useful in turn is Keynesian economics in explaining the 16th-Century Price Revolution? (A question that should not be attempted by first-year students).
6. Why did the degree or rate of inflation and its consequences differ from one European country to another: Spain, France, Italy, England, the Low Countries, Scandinavia, etc.?
7. How does the analysis of the Sixteenth-Century ‘Price Revolution’ as found in your readings correspond to the analyses of our current inflation -- both in the press, and in economics texts? Can one talk about ‘cost push’ and ‘demand pull’ forces in the 16th Century? (See also question 5).
8. What is Hamilton’s thesis of ‘profit inflation’? Why did he think that the monetary inflation of the sixteenth century contributed to European industrialization, to the growth of larger-scale forms of industrial capitalism in particular? How has his thesis been challenged by later critics, such as Nef and Felix?
9. Apart from Hamilton’s thesis, how much did inflation stimulate production, trade, and investment in Europe, England in particular, between 1540 and 1640? To what extent did inflation distort and damage the economic structure of some countries, hindering their economic development (e.g. Spain)?
10. To what extent, and under what circumstances, can inflation ‘cheapen’ the factor costs of production: of labour, land, and capital?
11. What were the social consequences of the Price Revolution: what social groups gained, and which ones lost by inflation?
12. How and why did the inflation of the ‘Price Revolution’ era come to an end in the course of the 17th century? Why did almost a century of either stable or falling prices, of deflation, ensue, to the eve of the modern Industrial Revolution? What role did monetary and real (demographic) factors play in that deflation, or secular downswing in the general price level? What were the economic and social consequences of that deflation.

Note: more consideration to such questions will be given in the topic on the ‘General Crisis of the Seventeenth Century.’

N.B. The arithmetic means that compose the real wage index in this table are the means of the five years in each quinquenniums, which are calculated individually by dividing each year's nominal wage index by the composite price index for that year; they are not calculated by dividing the quinquennials mean of the nominal wage index by the quinquennials means of the price index. The latter method will produce slight differences (as the difference between arithmetic and geometric means).

Earl J. Hamilton, American Treasure and the Price Revolution in Spain, 1501-1650 (Cambridge, Mass. 1934), pp. 34, 42.

Bullion imports were given only in decennial means; but the values of imported treasure, for gold and silver bullion combined were given in quinquennial means; and for each decade, the proportional values for the quinquennium was used to estimated the quinquennial means of the kilograms of fine metal imported. Hamilton's research in the Seville archives concluded in 1660; and no further research has revealed estimates of treasure imports into Seville beyond 1660. But see the following note concerning the related research of Michel Morineau.

Michel Morineau, however, has provided the following decennial mean estimates of imports of Spanish American silver into Europe, converted into kilograms of fine silver; and these estimates should be treated with suspicion, since they are taken from Dutch newspaper reports, of questionable value

1661-70	10,140,000	in kilograms fine silver
1671-80	13,760,000
1681-90	10,260,000

1691-1700 13,400,000

 Mint output data for the Low Countries:

- (a) Flanders only, 1350-1419;
- (b) Flanders, Brabant, Namur, Hainaut, and Holland-Zeeland, 1420-1499;
- (c) Bruges and Antwerp only, 1500-1599.

No Flemish mint data are available before 1334; and for such 25-year totals, the Flemish data commence therefore in 1350. Brabantine mint data are available from the 1370s, but are not included here until 1420, from which time Brabant becomes fully part of the Flemish monetary orbit, so that values of Brabantine mint outputs can be accurately recorded in terms of Flemish pounds (£) gros. Similarly the mints of Holland-Zeeland, Namur, and Hainaut became part of the Flemish-Burgundian monetary system only from the 1420s (when their mint records first become available).

 For 1475-99, Ghent and Mechelen mint outputs are also included in the totals for Bruges and Antwerp. From 1500, we currently have processed continuous mint data only for Antwerp and Bruges -- which were certainly the two leading mints of the southern Low Countries.
