The Hobsbawm Thesis and its Critics

READINGS:

Within each of the following sections, all readings are listed in the chronological order of original publication, when that can be ascertained, except for some collections of republished readings.

A. The Debate About the Seventeenth-Century ‘General Crisis’

-  1. Eric Hobsbawm, ‘The General Crisis of the European Economy in the 17th Century: I,’ Past & Present, no. 5 (May 1954), 33 - 53; and ‘The Crisis of the 17th Century: II,’ no. 6 (November 1954), 44 - 65. Republished as ‘The Crisis of the Seventeenth Century,’ in Trevor Aston, ed., Crisis in Europe, 1560 - 1660: Essays from Past and Present (London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1965), pp. 5 - 58. Essential reading.
- * 2. Roland Mousnier, Les XVI^e et XVII^e siècles (Paris, 1954; 3rd edn. Paris, 1961). This book, along with Hobsbawm's articles of the same year, sparked the ensuing debate.
- 3. H. R. Trevor-Roper, ‘The General Crisis of the 17th Century,’ Past & Present, no. 16 (November 1959), 31 - 64. Republished in Trevor Aston, ed., Crisis in Europe, 1560 - 1660: Essays from Past and Present (London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1965), pp. 59 - 96.
- * 4. E.H. Kossmann, E.J. Hobsbawm, J.H. Hexter, Roland Mousnier, J.H. Elliott, Lawrence Stone, H.R. Trevor Roper, ‘Symposium: Trevor Roper's ‘General Crisis’,’ Past & Present, no. 18 (November 1960), 8 - 42. Excerpts [Mousnier, Elliott, Trevor-Roper] republished in Trevor Aston, ed., Crisis in Europe, 1560 - 1660: Essays from Past and Present (London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1965), pp. 97 - 116.
- * 5. Eric Hobsbawm, ‘The Seventeenth Century in the Development of Capitalism,’ Science and Society, 24 (1960), 97-112.
- 6. Pierre Chaunu, ‘Le renversement de la tendance majeure des prix et des activités au XVII^e siècle,’ in Studi in onore di Amintore Fanfani, Vol. IV (Milan, 1962).
- 7. Ruggiero Romano, ‘Una crisi economica, 1619-1622,’ Rivista storica italiana, 74 (1962). Reissued in English translation as: ‘Between the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries: The Economic Crisis of 1619-1622,’ in Geoffrey Parker and Leslie Smith, eds., The General Crisis of the Seventeenth Century (London, 1978), pp. 165-225.

8. Ruggiero Romano, 'Encore la crise de 1619-1622,' Annales: E.S.C., 19 (1964), 31-37.
-  9. Trevor Aston, ed., Crisis in Europe, 1560 - 1660: Essays from Past and Present (London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1965):
- (a) Christopher Hill, 'Introduction,' pp. 1-4.
 -  (b) Eric J. Hobsbawm, 'The Crisis of the Seventeenth Century,' pp. 5-58. Republished from Past and Present, Nos. 5-6 (1954).
 - * (c) H.R. Trevor-Roper, 'The General Crisis of the Seventeenth Century,' pp. 59-96. Republished from Past and Present, No. 16 (1959).
 - (d) Roland Mousnier, J.H. Elliott, H.R. Trevor Roper, 'Trevor Roper's "General Crisis": A Symposium,' pp. 97 - 116. Republished as excerpts only from Past & Present, no. 18 (1960), 8 - 42. 1. J. E. Thorold Rogers, History of Agriculture and Prices in England, Vol. IV: 1401-1583 (1882). The original and still classic study on English prices and wages; but to be used with some care, because of his sampling methods.

QUESTIONS

1. Was there an ‘economic crisis’ of the 17th century -- or rather in the period ca. 1620-ca. 1740? Consider the following options:
 - (a) Was there a true crisis or series of crises that resulted in a secular downswing, marked by periodic depressions?
 - (b) Or was there merely a relative stagnation, or just a slower rate of economic growth, in comparison with the preceding rate of economic growth, in comparison with the preceding Price Revolution era, and the succeeding Industrial Revolution?
 - (c) Or was there, on the contrary, a general if slow secular upswing that provided a continuity between the Price Revolution and the Industrial Revolution eras?
2. If there were economic crises, depressions, or a secular downswing, which sector of the European economy was the most seriously affected: agriculture, industry, commerce and finance?
3. If you believe that there were economic crises and/or a secular downswing, what were the basic causes: exogenous or endogenous?
 - (a) demographic causes--and demographic consequences?
 - (b) monetary forces and price movements: again distinguish causes from effects;
 - (c) ‘built in’ or internal defects of the expanding European economy in the 16th-century;
 - (d) disruption and dislocation from famines, plagues, warfare, etc.;
 - (e) government policies, economic nationalism, and Mercantilism.
4. Discuss in particular Hobsbawm's thesis that the economic crisis of the 17th century was fundamentally due to the ‘internal contradictions’ of the 16th-century European economic expansion: in particular the economy's failure to break out of the ‘feudal mold’. What does Hobsbawm mean by ‘feudalism’ and ‘internal contradictions’?
5. Explain in particular Hobsbawm's theses that ‘internal contradictions’ led to ‘economic crises’ that in turn brought to the fore those economic and social forces that resolved those crises -- or explain how the ‘crises produced their own solutions’ in the following:
 - (a) ‘The specialization of ‘feudal capitalists’: the case of Italy.
 - (b) ‘The contradictions of expansion: eastern Europe’.
 - (c) ‘The contradictions of expansion: overseas and colonial markets’.
 - (d) ‘The contradictions of the home markets’.
6. Explain what Hobsbawm meant by the ‘Crisis of the Old Colonialism’ and the development of a ‘New Colonialism’ from the mid-17th century. Why, in his view, was ‘New Colonialism’ more conducive to economic growth and indeed necessary for modern industrialism?
7. Can you formulate an explanation or thesis that would attribute the 17th-century ‘crisis’ to purely endogenous causes, and yet be different from the Hobsbawm thesis? How in fact would you explain why the 16th-century European economic expansion failed to result in a general industrial revolution in Europe, and why that expansion generally came to a halt in the course of the 17th century?

8. How convincing do you find Trevor-Roper's thesis as an alternative explanation for the 'general crisis' of the 17th-century. To what extent was the 'general crisis' also a combination of political, military, and social crises? Were such crises independent of, or at least not directly caused by, the economic crises? To what extent did political crises and revolts, foreign and civil wars and rebellions, etc. contribute to the 'economic crisis' or secular downswing?
9. What was the 'Renaissance State': and how did it change its nature in the course of the 17th century? What was the significance of state finance in the 'general crisis'?
10. What was the nature, significance, and consequence of the agricultural 'recession' in this period (assuming that there was one)? What relationship did the 'agrarian' crises have to 'demographic' crises in this period? How did the 'agrarian crisis' resolve itself, or produce its own solution? Why does Hobsbawm not give a larger role to demographic problems? [How did Marx and Marxists treat Malthus and Malthusians?]
11. Was there a 'monetary crisis' in the 17th, and early 18th centuries? Did it also 'produce its own solution'? What were Hobsbawm's views on monetary questions? (See especially his postscript).
12. Which countries and which regions of Europe fared economically the best, and the worst, in this period:
 - (a) Italy: Lombardy, Venezia, Tuscany, Liguria, Naples, and Sicily
 - (b) Spain and Portugal
 - (c) France
 - (d) the Netherlands
 - (e) England
 - (f) Germany and Central Europe
 - (g) the Baltic and Eastern Europe.
13. In what ways do the 17th-century economic and social crises resemble those of the late Middle Ages; and in what respects do they differ?
14. In what ways did the nature, forms, and consequences of the 17th-century 'economic crisis' contribute to establishing the foundations for the 18th-century Industrial Revolution? In Hobsbawm's views, and in your own?
