The Economic and Social History of Later Medieval and Renaissance Europe

Topic No. 26: 'The Rise of the Gentry' Debate: Landlords, Social Change, and the Rise of Agrarian Capitalism in Tudor-Stuart England, 1540 - 1640

READINGS:

- 1. R.H. Tawney, 'The Rise of the Gentry, 1558-1640,' Economic History Review, 1st ser. 11 (1941). Reprinted with a postscript (1954) in E.M. Carus-Wilson, ed., Essays in Economic History, Vol. I (1954), pp. 173-214; and excerpts in Stone (1965), above.
- *2. R.H. Tawney, The Agrarian Problem in the Sixteenth Century (London, 1912; reissued London and New York, 1967). Introduction to the 1967 edn. by Lawrence Stone, pp. vii-xxii. See Part I, Introduction, pp. 1-18; and Part II, chapter 1, 'The New Rural Economy', pp. 177-230.
- *3. H.J. Habakkuk, 'English Landownership, 1680-1740,' Economic History Review, 1st ser. 10 (1940), 2 17. Provides the mirror image of Tawney's analysis, for the post 1660 period; and note that it was published in the year preceding the publication of Tawney's famous essay.
- 4. Hugh R. Trevor-Roper (Lord Dacre), The Gentry, 1540-1640: Economic History Review Supplement, no. 1 (Cambridge University Press, 1953), pp. 1 55. Tawney's chief opponent; and also the chief opponent of Lawrence Stone. Excerpt in Stone (1965) above.
- 5. Lawrence Stone, ed., Social Change and Revolution in England, 1540-1640, Problems & Perspectives Series (London, 1965). Part I consists of articles and essays (usually condensed by the major participants in this debate about the 'Rise of the Gentry' and the Origins of the Civil War: a) Lawrence Stone, 'Problems of Historiography: Introduction', pp. xi-xxvi.
 - b) R. H. Tawny, 'The Rise of the Gentry', pp. 6-18
 - c) H.R. Trevor Roper, 'The Decline of the Mere Gentry', pp. 19-32.
 - d) J. H. Hexter, 'The Military Decline of the Aristocracy', pp. 33-44.
 - e) P. Zagorin, 'Critique of the Trevor-Roper Thesis', pp. 45-59.
 - Part II consists of 'Select Documents' from Tudor-Stuart England
- 6. George E. Mingay, The Gentry: The Rise and Fall of a Ruling Class (London, 1976), especially chapters 1, pp. 1-17; and 3, pp. 39-79. The best modern study on this subject.
- *7. Lawrence Stone, 'The Anatomy of the Elizabethan Aristocracy,' Economic History Review, 1st ser. 18 (1948). A Tawney, supporter, essentially if not entirely. Excerpts in Stone (1965).
 - 8. H.R. Trevor-Roper, 'The Elizabethan Aristocracy: An Anatomy Anatomized,' Economic History Review, 2nd ser. 3 (1951), 279-98. A vigorous (indeed savage and heartless) attack on Stone, reprinted in part in Stone (1965).

- *9. Jack Hexter, 'Storm Over the Gentry,' Encounter, 10 (1958). Reprinted in J.H. Hexter, Reappraisals in History (London, 1961); and in Stone (1965).

QUESTIONS:

1. Who were the English 'gentry': how were they distinguished from the aristocracy and the ordinary commoners?

- 2. Discuss the Tawney-Trevor Roper debate. Were the English gentry 'rising' or 'falling' in the century 1540 1640; and why? When did the English gentry first emerge as a distinct social grouping? When did they achieve their major gains in economic, social, and political power? Is a purely economic interpretation possible?
- 3. What major changes occurred in English landholding in the 16th and 17th centuries in terms of: aristocracy, crown, Church, gentry, yeomanry?
- 4. Did the English aristocracy (titled nobility) make a 'comeback', particularly in landed economic power after the 1660s? Discuss the Habakkuk thesis.
