2012-2016: Lead Writing TA, Department of Economics

Writing instructions for TAs (WIT) is a Faculty of Arts and Science TA training initiative that seeks to integrate writing instruction with disciplinary teaching. In addition to receiving intensive training on how to teach writing skills to students, I was responsible for training my department's WIT course TAs, assisting course instructors in curriculum and assignment design, coordinating with the WIT coordinator and the undergraduate chair, and developing teaching and instructional material.

Professional Development

2015: Course Design Institute, Centre for Teaching Support and Innovation

Participated in a 2-day special professional development workshop that teaches principles of integrated course design, including how to design courses for significant learning, methods for developing effective learning outcomes, principles of assessment and design, principles of active learning, principles of lesson design, and various other strategies regarding course design.
